

HONESTY AND UNITY.

Compulsions of life.

Now since this life is an amazing reality itself it did not happen to be a one man indulgence and experience; rather a far reaching and inclusive phenomenon where every creature can freely enjoy all that this good life has in offer no matter what racial affiliation and cultural orientation ;so whether one is a black or white man; female or male this good life is there for them to cherish and celebrate; same applies to any existing tribal and religious identity; for even if one can classify themselves according to a particular tribal or religious affiliation the truth will still remain the same ;that there are no two lives at all ;no; rather only one life!!

It is clear therefore that even though one can have that perspective of themselves as a superior being above others; racially; culturally; sexually and tribally or even religiously the truth will still remain the same that none of them is free from the compulsions of this good life no matter what vain claims that particular individual may construct about themselves as being the one above the rest.

Or how then can one being claim that superiority over another when the source of existence for them all is one and the same and while their living needs are all but similar? Or which being is above the compulsions of this good life that do indiscriminately require every being to submit itself unto them no matter what racial identity and tribal orientation?

No one was born with a piece of mineral resource in their belly or a portion of land in their hand; no; everyone was rather born as natural as they were and still are only to find all things material prepared naturally and awaiting them to enjoy; and about when they were created no one knows anything at all even though they may claim ownership over them; at least out of blatant vanity and pure propaganda!!

It is clear then that there is a serious problem affecting the rest of existing creatures of the universe; this is the kind of problem involving issues of dominance and superiority where life itself is no longer viewed accordingly at all; rather about what physical force one is capable of irrespective of the consequence and effect thereof and how will that particular offensive force have impact on others.

Or aren't the creatures of the universe fighting amongst themselves for dominance of each over the other; or aren't they claiming ownership of mineral resources they were not born with and entitlement or control over portions of land they found here when they were born; or are they not fighting tribal and religious battles with each sector claiming innocence while pointing a blaming finger on the other?

And if they are capable of doing all these how can they dream of the universe having been turned into a paradise it is supposed to be in the absence of honesty and unity?

Impossible surely!

Life for every creature to enjoy and cherish!!

The white man is a human being just like me myself as a black man; same applies to a Venda or Xhosa tribal figure to me as a Pedi; for life wherein we all exist is one and that will never change no matter how hard each racial and tribal figure may try turning things upside down; just as it is that this life gave birth to everyone no matter what their religious affiliation and orientation; for even though one may claim worshipping a different creator everything comes back to one point that everyone is in need of good living and happiness no matter what their religion; for where good living is there shall happiness be found also.

This is the acknowledgement most universal creatures fail realising and making if not all of them; and because of that failure the whole universe is doomed to realities of distress and excess; where no creature shows no sense of empathy with the next nor any sign of sympathy for the other.

Ain' t it true then that people are busy killing one another on the basis of tribal and racial differences ;and aren't religious altercations and infightings so rife amongst most of the universal congregants on the basis that one so called god of each is more powerful and perfect than the other, or an' t it true that people destroys each other's life on issues around xenophobia and so called cultural indifferences no matter what similar skin colour and hair texture; or aren't young little children's future getting destroyed by old men with destructive drugs and early motherhood on the basis that such are not their children and therefore there is no need to worry no matter how destructive such practices are? Or are not men killing women on almost daily basis over things solvable without any quarrels and wrestling but through deeper understanding and desire to be honest and united with each other? Or are not young little children getting neglected and abandoned; or even killed; by those supposed to take proper care of them and give them good advice and guidance?

What this good life is all about then if no creature is here to be tolerant of the other? Or did not the god who created a white man be the one that created the black man; or did 'n t the one who created a Pedi create a Zulu or Venda national; or which one amongst them does not have blood and bones like the other or have feelings for both pain and pleasure; and how many lives are there that each is different from the other then?

Life is one and that will never change!!